INTRODUCTION

The Community Research Unit was established in January 1985 with the support of a Health and Welfare Canada Research Group Development Grant to assist local, municipally-based social planning and co-ordinating organizations in Metropolitan Toronto with their research activities.

This publication is the first of an annual series and introduces an important new service to the Metropolitan Toronto human services community in the area of research information. The Research Inventory was conceived following regular requests to the Community Research Unit for information about the existence and/or content of research studies, directories and computer data bases. Usually these requests are made by community organizations in some stage of a research project of their own. On occasion, a group will look around for examples of other projects that may feature a methodology that can be utilized. Perhaps a past study can be replicated to draw comparisons between different areas or to illustrate trends over time. Or theories developed in a previous study can be confirmed or denied by more recent information gathering.

Many excellent, informative studies are conducted by local groups with limited resources available for sophisticated printing and distribution. As a consequence, many are unknown to all but a few people immediately responsible for, or affected, by the study. In his book Megatrends, John Naisbitt remarks "that uncontrolled and unorganized information is no longer a resource in an information society.... Scientists who are overwhelmed with technical data.... charge that it takes less time to do an experiment than to find out if it has already been done".

Equally important are the many larger government departments and academic institutions that have computer data bases and information systems that are unknown to all but a few community groups. In other instances, people are aware of the data base but don't know what it contains or who to call regarding access. In fact, there is a certain irony at work here. The people, agencies and services who have contributed information to these data bases are, for one reason or another, often unable to extract that information later.

As indicated earlier, many enquiries about these sources of information have been made to the Community Research Unit. The Research Inventory represents a means of facilitating the responses of the Community Research Unit in a manner that will be of service to a larger audience.

More specifically, the Research Inventory has been established:

1. To maximize access to and use of research in Metro Toronto;
2. To acknowledge and publicize the existence of local unpublished research projects and reports done by community or neighbourhood groups and committees;
3. To maintain an up-to-date information bank to assist the Community Research Unit in responding to enquiries;
4. To reduce the 'reinventing-the-wheel' syndrome wherein several groups duplicate the efforts of project staff and volunteers in other areas of Metro;
5. To provide examples of methodologies and techniques that could be used in future;
6. To identify important data bases and directories which provide research opportunities beyond existing reports or listings.

This publication is only the beginning. With the involvement of readers the Research Inventory will continue to grow and become more comprehensive so that many people can benefit from collective research experiences. Forms are enclosed to be completed for studies, directories or data bases that are now underway or completed. Also, we would like to hear from readers if this publication contains errors or omissions on a study or computer system of yours and apologize in advance for any mistakes.

Due to limited resources, it simply wasn't possible to conduct a full review of each study and several entries have missing information. However, each entry does contain the name, address and phone number of a contact organization that can direct the reader to more comprehensive descriptions. It must also be noted that there was no attempt to evaluate the worth of the studies, directories or data bases herein. Our fundamental purpose is to provide access to information - the reader must determine what is of value.

Now that the Research Inventory is off the ground, we expect that future information generated by sponsors will be more accurate. The publication only represents the tip of the iceberg. Ongoing access to the computer file will provide up-to-date, specific information particular to most combinations of geographical area, client type, subject area and age group.

The accompanying set of instructions describes the Research Inventory more fully and explains important issues such as:

- o what is and is not included in the inventory
- o procedures for making 'ad hoc' requests
- o procedures for completing the entry form
- o cost of requests and publications

It is not our intention to replicate existing directories and inventories of research studies. In most cases, we will list each of these as a single entry so that you will be able to gain access to a wider range of studies than those contained in the Research Inventory.

We hope that you will take advantage of the Research Inventory, both by making contributions that will aid the distribution of your report and by calling or writing the Community Research Unit for customized lists of studies in your area of interest.

ELIGIBILITY

1. Type of Studies Included

Must concern applied research information (usually of a statistical nature) describing people and the human services they may use or need such as:

- o computer data bases and files
- o descriptive program surveys
- o directories of services or research
- o human service planning studies
- o needs assessments and surveys
- o program evaluations
- o resource inventories
- o service profiles and statistics

While the emphasis is on the collection of applied information and statistics, other types of research studies will be included if they contain information relevant to human services planning. For example, a clinical study may feature background demographic data of particular use in planning for a client group and provide excellent references for other organizations.

2. Geographic Focus

The primary focus is on Metropolitan Toronto and its municipalities. However, any studies from other areas having an impact on Metro services and planning activities will be included.

3. Time Period Covered

The Research Inventory will attempt to be all-inclusive for studies dating from 1980 onwards. Pre-1980 studies that might bear replication or serve as 'how-to' examples will be included.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. How To Get Information From the Research Inventory

The annual publication will include basic information about each entry submitted up to the printing date. Entries will be updated and added onto the computer file throughout the year and can be accessed through contacting the Community Research Unit.

Special requests can be made for lists and descriptions of studies that conform to one or more of the following characteristics:

- o geographical scope of the study/data base
- o subject/topic area
- o age group
- o client group

Requests will normally be ready for mailing or pick-up in two weeks time, subject to change due to circumstance or the nature of the request. In the future it is expected that access will also be possible through electronic communications from off-site computers owned by users. This is not possible at the present time.

2. Service Charges

THere will be a minimum charge of $10.00 for custom requests in addition to a fee for the recovery of production costs. This fee will be based upon the following factors:

- the number of records selected for transmission

- amount of time spent in preparation (program and administrative staff)
- whether the requested information has previously been requested
- mailing and photocopying costs
- computer time used
- cost of disks if required
- cost of equipment depreciation

While it is our intention to recover the costs associated with custom requests, we do not wish to deny access to individuals or non-profit organizations with limited resources. Therefore any requests for special rates or waivers should be made to the Senior Research Consultant of the Community Research Unit.

It should be noted that many of the entries listed in this publication do not have a price listed under Cost of Publication. This does not mean that the publications are necessarily free - only that no price was listed within the report, or that the report was not directly reviewed. It is suggested that this matter be discussed with the contact organization.

3. How To Put Information Into the Research Inventory

The ongoing success of the Research Inventory depends largely upon the initiative of users to complete and send in their own entry forms. While there will be an annual push to gather entries, it is best that entries be made as they happen. They will be added to the computer file within a week and ready for access. If sponsors of studies, directories or databases wish to add to, or change an existing entry, they are welcome to do so.

New forms or enquiries should be directed to:

Senior Research Consultant,
Community Research Unit,
C/O Social Planning Council of Metropolitan Toronto,
Suite 1000, 950 Yonge Street,
Toronto, Ontario.
M4W 2J4

Telephone: (416) 961-9831

4. Some Notes about the Entry Form Categories

i) In the case of incomplete research, it may not be possible to answer all questions fully. Respondents should answer as best they can. The detailed description should be omitted in this case since it would be expected that the detailed account would feature some information about results and conclusions. This information is usually not available until the final report is completed.

ii) If the entry is a data base, do not include Author's Name, Publication Date and Publication Cost.

iii) For Publication Date, enter month (if known) and year (MM/YY) only.

iv) For Access Type, enter the code which describes the access, if any, to a computer file containing the results of the study or to a data base. Since many research studies contain information from different sources, it should be noted that this category refers to the study being cited - that data collected directly by project staff, or any secondary analysis of existing data on a new computer file. The Access Comments provide for further explanation.

v) Please do not use the names of individuals in the Contact Organization Name line as they are subject to change;

vi) The Detailed Description is to be completed on the reverse side of the entry form and should contain about 250 words (about 20 typewritten lines). It should describe the contents of the publication or data base in more detail than is allowed in the general description. This information can often be found clearly stated in the introduction or summary of the report. To save time, simply photocopy the passage and send it along with the entry form.

The detailed description will not be included in the annual publication but will be available to those who have read the general description and have an interest in learning more about the methodology, recommendations, conclusions or data base structure. If the entry is an incomplete research report, this section should not be completed until final approval or publication takes place.
